70	Institute: V.V.GIRI NATIONAL LABOUR INSTITUTE Course: THE FUTURE OF WORK -NAVIGATING TRANSFORMATIONS EFFECTIVELY Start Date: 11-10-2021 End Date: 29-10-2021	This training programme is being organised in the context of two major global developments. One, driven by various mega trends technological advancements, demographic transition and globalisation the world of work has been experiencing massive transformations in the last two to three decades. This has led to a multitude of tendencies: the elimination of old jobs and emergence of new forms of employment, dominance of non-standard forms of employment relations, increased automation and the consequent substitution of capital for workers, changing skill sets in work processes, emergence of new business models (gig economy, etc.), Decentralisation of economic activities, and so on. How will the future of work pan out and what strategies need to be put in place to seize the opportunities presented by these transformations? second, in this crucial and evolving phase of the world of work, the outbreak and spread of covid-19 heralds unprecedented challenges, particularly in terms of safeguarding jobs and incomes of the people and also rejuvenating the economy. Nuanced understanding and analysis of the ongoing transformations in the world of work, on the one hand, and the ramifications of the covid-related crisis in the labour and employment scenario, on the other, help us to identify some of the major pathways that may be navigated by the public policies related to labour in order to ensure a favourable and brighter future of work. It is also very obvious that we need collective action and proactive involvement of all concerned stakeholders. In this respect, the prominent role of india in managing	ALL COUNTRIES	30 / 20	AZERBAIJAN ECUADOR KENYA MAURITIUS NIGER NIGERIA PERU PHILIPPINES SOMALIA VIETNAM

		transformations in the world of work and responding to the covid crisis assumes paramount significance. The programme will highlight some of the major policy interventions initiated in india to show how use of technology can be pivotal for enhancing governance of the world of work. The programmewill also highlight some of the innovative labour management practices adopted in indian public sector and private sector companies to evolve strong partnership to respond to the challenges of change brought out by technological transformations. The specific objectives of the programme are: •analyse the major contours of the future of work. •trace technological changes and their impacts on and implications for work and work relations. •examine the major labour market implications of covid-19 and assess the responses of various stakeholders. •delineate the components of the major pathways to ensure a brighter and equitable future of work. These include: striking a balance between qualitative and quantitative dimensions of employment; ensuring gender equality at the workplace; developing a robust social protection system, particularly to cover those in the informal economy; use of digital tools to improve labour market outcomes; and promoting social dialogue.
