The program explores core principles in news reporting and ethics, emphasizing objectivity, integrity, and accuracy. Participants will examine the role of journalists in fostering social sustainability, especially through unbiased news coverage, which supports informed public discourse. A central component addresses ethical complexities in ai driven news, such as misinformation and algorithmic bias, prompting journalists to critically assess the influence of technology on modern media. This theoretical foundation is coupled with immersive technical training in the news studio, where participants master multi camera operations, production control room functions, and the use of nrcs, switchers, and teleprompters. These skills are essential for the high pressure demands of live broadcasting. The course culminates in a comprehensive assignment. Each participant will produce an individual news bulletin and coordinate a panel discussion. This project allows them to apply skills in content creation, interviewing, and technical production, ensuring a synthesis of their learning in a real world context. By advancing their technical skills and reinforcing ethical standards, the course equips journalists to navigate the challenges of evolving media landscapes. 304	Institute: V.V.GIRI NATIONAL LABOUR INSTITUTE Course: FUTURE OF WORK AND TECHNOLOGY Start Date: 10-03-2025 End Date: 28-03-2025	Globally, the major transformations such as digital platforms, automation and other innovations are changing the world of work and also the e-governance and service delivery mechanisms accelerate the massive transformations. Technological advancements eliminate old jobs and lead to the emergence of new forms of employment, increased automation, changing skill sets in work processes, the emergence of the gig economy, and the dominance of non-standard forms of employment relations, so on. Moreover, the outbreak and spread of covid-19 emerged more challenges in jobs and income of the people and it requires special attention to revisit the labour and employment scenario in the developing countries. This training will benefit to pinpointing the major pathways that may be navigated by the public policies related to labour to ensure a favourable and brighter future of work. It is also very obvious that we need collective action and proactive involvement of all concerned stakeholders. Specifically, the prominent role of india in managing transformations in the world of work, jobs and technology undertakes utmost importance.
